firm profile

Praxis3 was established in 1997 with the mission of intersecting design excellence with pragmatic problem-solving, as applied to some of the most challenging sites and building programs. As sophisticated design projects have demanded a greater range of expertise than ever before, Praxis3 has brought together in collaboration a team of skilled professionals from the disciplines of architecture, planning, and design. Our singular combination of individual talents and extensive knowledge base, developed through years of practice, allows us to offer our clients a comprehensive approach to the building process; one that enables us not only to assess a wider range of building options, but to do so with greater speed and accuracy. As responsible professionals we approach each of our projects as its own unique set of issues, doing extensive research on each of them, asking hard questions and listening carefully. Then we respond with the sort of creative thinking which permits us to assess each project's unique design possibilities.

Our explorations and built projects have led to numerous recognitions, including the commission among only 10 architects nationwide to speculate upon the "House for the Next Millennium," presented in a major exhibition at the Contemporary Arts Center in Cincinnati and a First Place award in the Automotive Retail category of the Institute of Store Planners 34th Annual Competition for the design of the Nalley Lexus facility in suburban Atlanta. Our recent mixed-use housing commissions for clients including the Atlanta Housing Authority, Trammell Crow Residential, and Integral Properties, are recognized as the leading edge in Atlanta's inner-city revival along Memorial Drive and historic Auburn Avenue.
